Azure Tech Groups Leaders Update

Greetings,

Welcome to the first monthly communication from the updated program. We are excited to be coming to your inbox with a new format and even more excited to be able to interact with you in the Azure Tech Groups – Leaders Hub on Microsoft Tech Community.
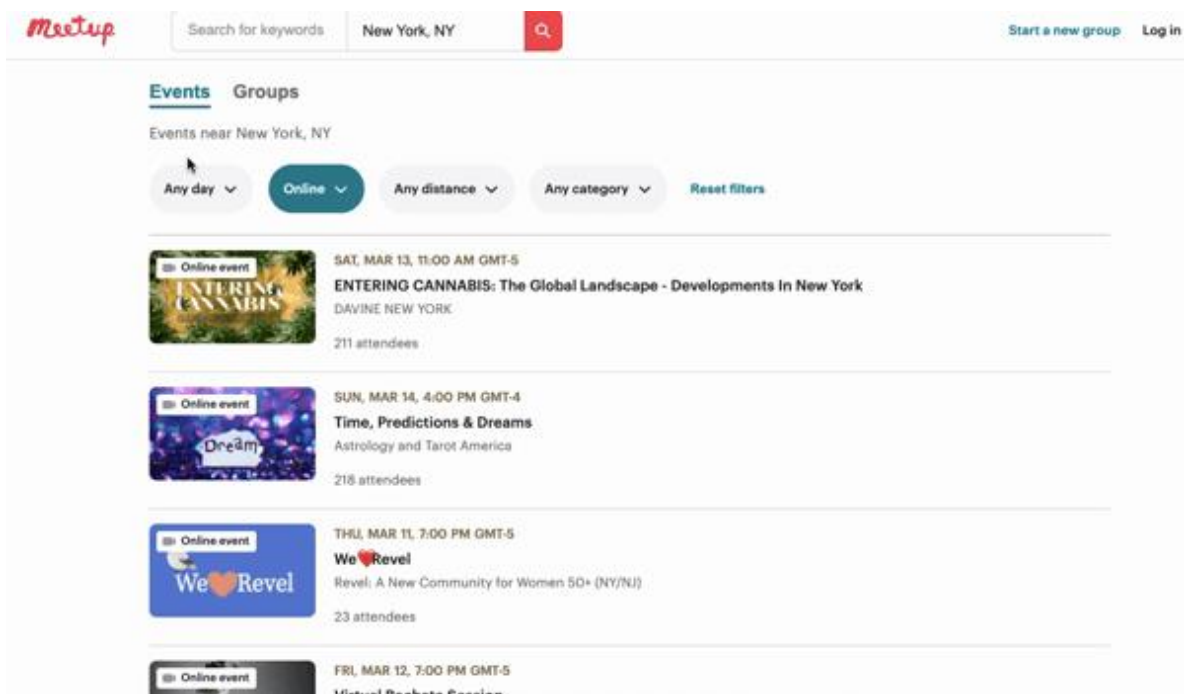

Microsoft Ignite is now behind us but you can still catch sessions on demand – and don't forget about the sessions you saved to your backpack.

Microsoft Build is coming up in May, and our next Azure Tech Groups Quarterly Call will be in June. We will share more details with you as they become available, but in the meantime, check out this month's tips and interesting finds.

News and tips from Meetup

Meetup has released a series of search improvements to make it easier for members to find the right events and groups. Improvements are first being rolled out to guests (i.e. users who are not logged-into a Meetup account) and will eventually be available to all members. Take a look at the new experience by logging out of your Meetup account and heading out to www.meetup.com:

Interesting finds

- Challenge: 30 Days to Learn It
  We shared a sneak peek with you on the last quarterly call, and 30 Days to Learn It is now live! Sign up and complete a skills challenge in 30 days and you could be eligible to receive 50 percent off the cost of Microsoft Certification exam.

- Event: Global Azure 2021 (April 15-17, 2021)
  Global Azure is a 3-day virtual conference led by worldwide Azure community leaders. The call for speakers opened on March 1st, so sign up to attend or perhaps lead a session yourself.
